Sikhs in Europe

Migration, Identities and Representations

Edited by Knut A. Jacobsen, University of Bergen, Norway and Kristina Myrvold, Lund University, Sweden

'Without a doubt, a ground breaking work, this pioneering study of Sikh communities in eleven European countries, prepared largely by a new generation of scholars, will serve as a landmark contribution to the literature on the development of a global Sikh community. The essays successfully capture the religious, social and political complexity of the lives of the Sikhs in Europe and the book will be required reading for anyone interested in recent experiences in Sikh migration and settlement.'

Gurinder Singh Mann, University of California, USA

Studies in past decades have focused on the history, culture and religious practices of Sikhs in North America and the UK, but few have focused on Sikhs in continental Europe. This book fills this gap, offering new empirical data and theoretical analyses of Sikhs in eleven European countries. Focusing on patterns of migration, transmission of traditions, identity construction and cultural representations from the perspective of local Sikh communities in Europe, the authors explore general patterns of settlement, institution building and cultural transmission among the European Sikhs.
